ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A system and method for self-adaptive redundancy choice logic uses BIST data to determine if a memory is functional. If a portion of the memory is not functional, the system and method selects a redundant memory section for use. A BIST is then run a second time to confirm the functionality of the selected redundant memory section.